Honor for Wingfield

Firm in his belief that he could best serve the state of Nevada in a private capacity, George Wingfield refused the appointment to the United States senate. Personal ambition and duty to the state were the two important factors considered by Wingfield, and in arriving at his decision he cast his ambition aside and decided that he could best serve the state as a private citizen, not as a United States senator.

There are few men in existence who, having the ability and means, would refuse a United States senatorship. Of this number George Wingfield is the peer. He is a far greater man today than when tendered the honored appointment by Governor Oddie, for in his refusal he has shown himself to be a man far above the average. He does not deny that he has ambitions to represent Nevada in the United States senate and in explaining his ambitions declares that personal motives could wait until he had fulfilled present plans that had to do with the welfare of Nevada.

Protect the Pedestrian

The county commissioners have drafted several ordinances regulating the speed of automobiles while traveling the streets of Tonopah, but no action has been taken with regard to motorcycles. It would not be a bad idea if the smaller gasoline wagons were placed under the same restrictions. At the same time an ordinance should be enacted that would govern the turning of street corners and force all vehicles to keep to the right side instead of keeping to the side most convenient and endangering the life of the unfortunate pedestrians who are forced to walk.

If the time ever arrives that George Wingfield requests the nomination for the United States senatorship from the republican party he can be assured that the request will be cheerfully granted. From the sentiment that exists throughout this state it appears beyond a doubt that the request for the nomination and the securing of the same will be the equivalent to the election, for both republicans and democrats alike have joined in praising Wingfield for his stand.

When it comes to securing the western votes the plain name of Bill will carry more weight than the fancy cognomen of Woodrow. The west never did look with favor upon aristocratic tendencies.

Hound dogs and cocked hats are believed by some people to be omens of ill luck. A good old fashioned rabbit's foot is the best thing for luck after all.

Willie Randolph Hearst has gained the distinction of picking another loser. Willie always was unlucky in playing politics.

Champ Clark can now sympathize with Roosevelt and in addition is eligible to the colonel's private down and out club.

Bryan in Disguise

Woodrow Wilson will have a rather hard row to hoe before he is seated in the presidential chair at Washington, if such a thing ever happens. In tying up with William J. Bryan, he broke with Hearst, Watterson, Colonel Harvey and a score of other influential democrats and in order to secure the much prized harmony in the ranks of his party, he will be forced to humiliate himself by bowing to the eastern leaders. It will not be the first time that Wilson has been forced to descend from his dignified position and bend his knees in the dust for he is an adept at this kind of business.

The leading democrats of Nevada acknowledge that had Clark been nominated he would have been elected president. He was recognized as the strongest man of the entire bunch of candidates and his record was without a flaw. Now the opportunities to secure a democratic president are lost, and this fact is admitted by the majority of the rank and file of that party. Wilson is regarded as the weakest exponent of the ideas of democracy that could be selected, and it is this weakness that will result in the defeat that is inevitable.

The stand taken by Bryan is regarded as the downfall of Wilson. Bryan, realizing that he could not secure the nomination for himself for the fourth—or is it the fifth time—threw his strength to the candidate whom he could control body and soul, and this candidate proved to be Wilson. Three times—or is it four—the voters of the United States have declared they would have none of Bryan, and now under the guise of Wilson, Bryan is again attempting to secure the presidency.

Hearst and Heney should be forced to keep out of politics hereafter.

It is now assured that champ is not the abbreviation of champion.
